To these, who have remained loyal to POETRY and its purposes over many years; to the Friday Club and Society of Midland Authors, who have donated prizes and other benefits; and particularly to the Carnegie Corporation of New York, whose generous gifts have enabled POETRY to continue, the editors of the magazine wish to express their appreciation and that of the poets we have published.

The death of Henry J. Patten, which occurred on February 24, is a severe loss to the cultural life of his community. He was a guarantor of POETRY from its earliest years and a good friend of its founder. Since her death he had been an active member of our Financial Committee, working to raise funds for the perpetuation of the magazine.
